PIGS NEXT DOOR ONE SHEET

Primetime goes hog-wild when the Stymington family moves to suburbia in the all-new, animated television series "The Pigs Next Door."

The Stymington's are a typical suburban family - except for just one thing - they are pigs! Pink and proud, Phil wants to become a social pioneer and move pigs into the 21st Century, so he packs up his porcine brood, and moves the family out from the farm and into the suburban town of Schlicter Falls!

Phil's wife Clara, an attractive sow in her mid-thirties, has misgivings about their move, but quickly begins to enjoy the temptations and diversions of the city. Fourteen-year-old Chuckie is like any kid of his age – he's into music, video games and action movies... but, unlike other kids, he's a pig and faces the unique challenge of fitting in with the crowd. Then there's April, nine-years-old, cute, adorable – and adamant about remaining a pig!

As society's first "Swine Citizens," the Stymington's face challenges we all face at home... at school... and on the job...

First, there are the neighbors to contend with – and their feelings about the pigs next door just couldn't be further apart! The conservative Stumps are an uptight clan ruled by Ike Stump, a retired military man who believes the only good pig comes sliced and served on rye bread. Although he has a gun collection, Ike would never use violence, but he'll do anything in his power to get rid of his "oddball" neighbors! The politically correct Crenshaw family, on the other hand, welcomes the diversity that the Stymingtons bring to the neighborhood.

On the job, Pop Phil exhibits his piggish good looks to win a starring role in the Hollywood hit "Pig in Hong Kong," while Clara ventures into a familiar arena to become the hottest wrestling sensation at the local "Mud Pit." And at school, Chuckie reaps the benefits of high-school life as football's "Pig Skin Hero!" But don't think these trendsetters have forgotten their piggy connection and traditions. Dedicated piglet, April, is on hand to serve frequent reminders.

Join the swine of primetime, where getting along with the neighbors takes on a whole new meaning in Fox Family Channel's, "Pigs Next Door."

PHIL STYMINGTON
The swine family patriarch, Phil Stymington, is a proud hog in his early forties. Setting an example for his children, Phil boldly leads his family into the suburbs. Possessing a short temper, Phil often retaliates pig prejudicism with his catch phrase, "You can kiss my shank portion."

CLARA STYMINGTON
An attractive sow in her early forties, Clara Stymington embodies the practicality of a countrywoman. Although she has misgivings about her family's upstart move, Clara readily adapts to the ways of big city life including her excessive usage of makeup.

CHUCKIE STYMINGTON
Fifteen-year-old Chuckie Stymington is a typical teenager who loves music, video games, action films and high-energy excitement. Yet, his normal adolescent challenges are magnified due to his swine family lineage.

APRIL STYMINGTON
The youngest member of the Stymington brood, eight-year-old April Stymington, is one headstrong piglet. Extremely outspoken, April openly displays pig pride at school which often makes her the target of cruel school pranks.

IKE STUMP
A very conventional man, Ike Stump despises his new pig neighbors. Unlike his wife, he is not willing to dispel his pig prejudices.

GINGER "COOKIE" STUMP
Ginger is the complete opposite of her husband, Ike Stump. A good-natured neighbor, Ginger easily gains a close rapport with her new pig neighbors especially Clara Stymington.

BRADLEY CRENSHAW
An affable, upwardly mobile, young urban professional, Bradley Crenshaw is in his late thirties. He welcomes the diversity that the Sytmingtons bring to the neighborhood and actively recruits Phil Stymington to join in his political and social activities.

BETH CRENSHAW
An attractive women in her late thirties, Beth Crenshaw is the mirror reflection of her husband, Bradley. The Stymingtons have become her latest political crusade and she is determined to fight for their equal rights.

BEN CRENSHAW
The Crenshaw's fifteen-year-old son, Ben, embodies the definition of a nerd and is completely socially inept. Desperate for companionship, Ben befriends Chuckie Stymington and becomes a "wannabe" pig.

LIZZIE CRENSHAW
The Crenshaw toddler, Lizzie, is constantly embarrassing her politically correct parents by referring to the Stymington family as "piggies" and regarding the swine neighbors as her new toy pets.
